Bidwell Park's 3,670 acres encompass a range of natural habitats and an abundance of wildlife within those habitats. At night, underground, and beneath debris exists a world all its own, where much of the Park's inhabitants remain hidden and unseen. Among these reclusive animals are salamanders, frogs and toads, turtles, lizards, and snakes. This comprehensive field guide covers all 29 native and non-native, presently and historically occurring species of Bidwell Park. If you want to learn more about Chico, California's treasured municipal Park's amphibians and reptiles, there is probably no better place to begin. This regional but informative book includes:

- Detailed species accounts of all amphibians and reptiles within Bidwell Park.
- Full color illustrations of all species covered.
- Line drawings depicting characteristics of amphibians and reptiles discussed within.
- Two maps illustrating both Bidwell Park's varied habitats and its most prominent trails.
- A checklist of all other known amphibians and reptiles of Butte County, CA.
- An extensive glossary to assist with herpetological terms.

Bidwell Park is a priceless entity worth our attention and protection. Awareness is the first step towards conservation.
